Gen. Evans Says Nation's Army Must Be Ready if It Wants to Win.

KLINE LEADS MARCHERS

Fife and Drum Sound at Gay Celebration at Hotel Plaza.

The corridors of the Plaza Hotel resounded last night to the fife and drum when the Old Guard in the best of high wines and spirits celebrated its eighty-eighth anniversary. Former Mayor Ardolph L. Kline, the newly elected Major of the organization, presided at the annual dinner and received the magnum of champagne with which the Old Guard always honors a new commander. With Major Kline at the guest table were Rear Admiral Charles D. Sigsbee, retired; Brig.-Gen. Robert K. Evans, commanding the Department of the East; William B. Ellison, partment of the East; William B. Ellison, Col. Asa Bird Gardiner, Dock Commissioner R. A. C. Smith, Col. J. Frank Supplee, Major-Gen. McAlpin and Commander F. B. Stedman.

Gen. Evans deprecated the tendency of patriotic but poorly informed citizens to talk about the ability of the United States to whip any nation without taking pains to be prepared.

"I heard a Congressman say not long ago," said Gen. Evans, "that we don't need a big army and that we could get a million men whenever we needed them, get them over night, to lick any nation on earth. This talk about over night armies makes me mad. I've been with a few of them and the results haven't been satisfactory. Because of the lack of public comprehension of the needs of the army the army is away below the of public comprehension of the needs of the army the army is away below the standard of the navy. We are practically destitute of field artillery. We have only enough field artillery to equip a division. The Japanese have twenty-two divisions completely equipped in every respect." Admiral Sigsbee praised President Wil-son for hesitating to launch the nation into war.

"I have seen men die all around me," "I have seen men die all around me, said the Admiral, "and I know that war is a frightful thing. I hope that the present trouble in Mexico can be settled by the navy and that the army will not have to go into that country.

The Old Guard followed its custom by marching to Grace Church yesterday afternoon and attending a memorial service. Major Kline led the column down Fifth avenue and the chaplain of the organization, the Rev. James B. Wasson, de-livered the address in Grace Church. The crowd in Broadway was so large that the police had to be called to clear the street before the Old Guard could enter the
